HENRY

Rinky had never seen such a heavy snow-fall! As far as he could see the Circle-O-Ranch was covered with a beautiful, pure white blanket of fluffy snow! And it was still pouring down!

Not far from the ranch Rinky could see the frozen surface of the Klickachoo River which ran right through the ranch Rinky's father owned. Right this minute, Rinky's father was enjoying a good chuckle at the expense of a surprise visitor, Captain Saul T. Dann!

Well, the thing that amused Rinky's father was the present Captain Dann had brought all the way across the country for Rinky! It was a nifty little rowboat!

"Ha, ha," laughed Rinky's father! "Captain Dann, now that the snow and ice have covered the Klickachoo River it looks like you're going to have to abandon ship!"

Captain Dann just grinned and continued to uncrate the rowboat. "Can't tell when you might need a boat, eh, Rinky!" Rinky tried to smile but he didn't feel so good. Gee, would he like to go for a ride on the Klickachoo River in his new rowboat! But how could he now that the river was frozen over with slick ice!

Suddenly it happened! Blam! Blam! Blam! The ranch door opened with a loud bang! In rushed a snow-covered cowhand. Snow swirled inside the ranch and before the door could be closed a pile of snow was on the ranch house floor!

"There's a heifer lost way up the Klickachoo River! We can't reach it by land because of the snow! If we don't rescue it soon it'll be too late!" shouted the excited cowhand in alarm.

Rinky's father was very upset. He walked up and down shaking his head and frowning. He paused to look out the window. "Oh, just look at that snow! We'll never be able to get through to that young cow! I just can't stand here . . . but what can I do?"

Captain Dann turned to Rinky and said, "Fetch me your sled, Rinky! I want a hammer and some nails, too!" Zip! Rinky was gone like a shot after the things the grinning old captain wanted!

"I guess I was right when I said you never can tell when you might need a boat!" Captain Dann said to Rinky's father who looked at the smiling old sailor darkly!

"This is no time for joking, Captain Dann! I'm going through the snow anyway!" said Rinky's father as he clumped toward the door. Captain Dann just grinned some more as he watched Rinky's father dress quickly and hurry out into the storm.

"Where's Father going, Captain Dann?" Rinky asked as he put his sled in front of the smiling old man. "Never mind, Rinky! We've got some fast work to do!" said the captain.

Rinky watched in awe as the busy captain removed the runners from the sled and with a loud bang! clang! bang! bop! nailed them to the bottom of the rowboat he had given to Rinky!

Captain Dann hurried outside and returned with a long pole and an old piece of canvas. Rinky's eyes popped as he watched Captain Dann nail the pole to the center of the boat! Then the captain rigged a sail out of the canvas and looked up at Rinky with a wide grin!

THERE MUST BE AN EASY
WAY TO DO
THIS !

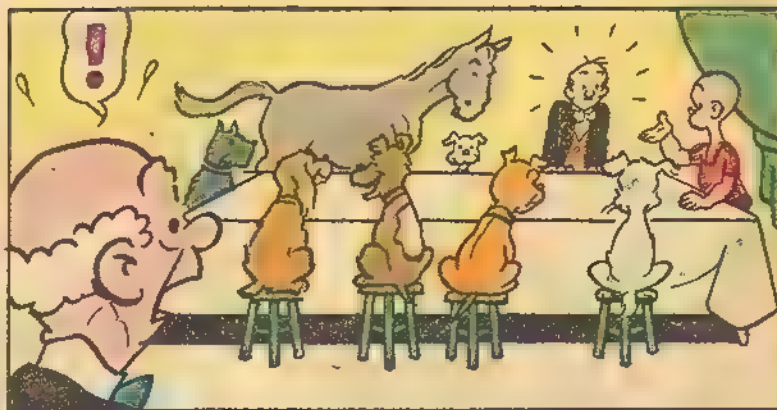

A-HA!

THE END!

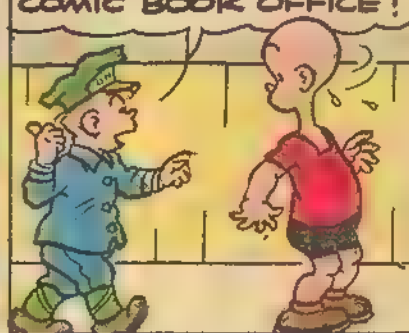

WELL - THAT WINDS UP
ANOTHER STORY!

HEY, HENRY - WAIT!

ONE OF YOUR READERS
JUST WIRED THE COMIC BOOK OFFICE!

HE SAYS THE RESTAURANT IN YOUR STORY HAD A VERY SMALL FRONT - LIKE A TINY BEANERY!

YES-
YES!

-BUT, INSIDE - THE PLACE LOOKED LIKE A CROSS BETWEEN THE BALDORF - WASTORIA AND BRAND CENTRAL STATION -
PLUS AN ARMY OF WAITERS AND CHEFS - HOW COME?

DON'T BOTHER ME WITH SUCH DETAILS - - - I ONLY ACT IN THESE STORIES - I DON'T DRAW THEM!

WELL - THAT'S THAT!

THE END - AGAIN!

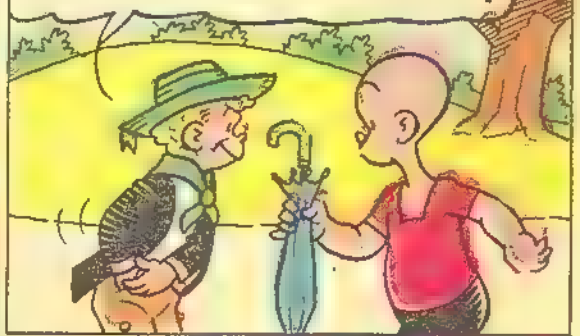

CARL ANDERSON'S —

YOU LOOK UNCOMFORTABLE - CARRYING AN UMBRELLA ON SUCH A FINE DAY - HENRY!

"There she be, Rinky! A genuine, slippery, fast iceboat!" chuckled the delighted captain. "Yow! Now we can drag her out to the Klickachoo River and sail right down to the lost cow!" shouted Rinky as he jumped with excitement.

Without losing one minute, Captain Dann and Rinky pulled the iceboat outside and started pushing it toward the ice-covered river! It was hard work but they soon had their little craft out on the icy surface of the river.

"Anchors aweigh! Hoist the starboard jib! Lower the boom! Full speed ahead!" shouted Rinky as he stood in the front of the boat and waited eagerly to go cruising along the ice.

"A-hem!" said Captain Dann, as his face wrinkled into an amused smile. "I've been at sea over fifty years, Rinky! Never have I heard sailing orders given exactly the way you just gave them!" the captain said.

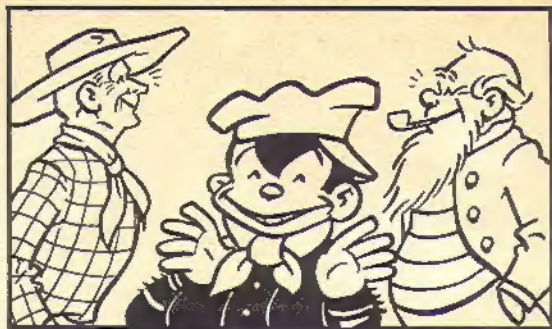

Rinky was greatly pleased to hear this and grinned at the bearded old sailor! "Am I doing all right, Captain?" Rinky asked nervously.

"Carry on, my boy! Someday you'll make a great cowboy!" thundered the captain as he trimmed sails to catch a strong breeze whipping down the river.

Zzzzzzzzzzz . . . the runners slipped over the glassy surface of the ice and the iceboat whistled down the ice-coated Klickachoo River with Rinky at the front of the boat!

Rinky's eyes glowed with delight as he watched the ground whiz by at a faster and faster rate! He didn't mind the snow or the wind or the cold. Captain Saul T. Dann stayed at the back of the boat and handled the sail. Then he called to Rinky in a loud voice, "Come on aft, Rinky!"

Rinky hurried to the back of the boat. Captain Dann removed his battered old captain's hat and with a smile placed it right square on Rinky's head! "This is your ship, Rinky! It's no more than right that you should be captain of her! And who ever heard of a ship's captain without a hat!"

Just then Rinky heard a sharp, sad Mooooo . . . Mooooo! It was the lost cow! Captain Dann steered Rinky's ship to the shore. There was the thin, shivering little cow. It was covered with snow!

In less time than it takes to drop an anchor, Rinky and the captain had the bawling cow safely aboard. The trip back to the ranch couldn't have been any faster if there had been a motor attached to Rinky's boat! Whizzzzzz! The trim little craft seemed to fly over the ice!

Rinky just loved sailing. Especially now that he was the captain! Soon they steered into shore again. They left the little animal in the boat and with the aid of a good wind pushed the boat up to the ranch house!

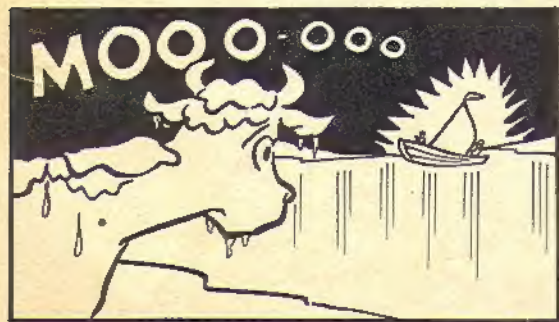

Rinky and Captain Dann were just putting the cow into the barn when Rinky's father came trudging up through the snow! He looked as snowy as a snowman!

"What are you doing with that cow, Rinky?" he asked with a frown on his face.

"Putting it in the barn where it will be nice and warm, Father! We just went up the river on my iceboat and rescued it!"

"Rescued . . . you mean . . . that's the lost cow!" Rinky's father said in amazement. Then Captain Dann pointed over to the iceboat and Rinky's father grinned from ear to ear!

As they walked toward the ranch house, Rinky's father patted Captain Rinky on the shoulder and said, "My, my! I don't believe I've ever seen a better looking sailor in my life!" Rinky didn't see Captain Saul T. Dann and his father grin and exchange broad winks . . . nor did Captain Rinky know he had his hat on backwards!
